Topic: Information Ethics

Cárdenas-García, J. F. (2018). Information ethics in the information age. Cosmos and History: The Journal of Natural and Social Philosophy, 14(3), 147-166.

According to the article, information ethics covers a wide range of issues, including accountability and liability, plagiarism, advertising and propaganda, and libel legislation. In the information age, information can play a moral role in our lives. It is the product of our moral evaluations and actions, and information producers have opportunities and constraints that require ethical analysis.
